

Figure 1: Mean relative abundance of canopy trees (assessed via 3-5 50m x 5m transects sampled every 50m of elevation gain) along studied elevation gradient from Lake McDonald up to tree line at Mt. Brown in Glacier National Park. Elevation bands at which cores were collected from the three focal species (capturing the range center and upper and lower range boundaries) are indicated with arrows.